May It Please Your Excellency,

I, the undersigned most respectfully beg to bring the following to your Excellency's kind consideration

1 During my three months tour last year through several Taluks of the Province the Bellary District and Hyderabad, I found that, on account of the want of a systematised form of notation to record music to writing, the teaching of music is very imperfect, as imparted at present in the various schools. This defect is admitted on all hands and many eminent men have done their best to improve the notation. The late - professor of Chinnasany Adalliar, A, the best authority on Native and Foreign Music, observing that no progress in -- Hindu Music was possible unless the European notation was adopted published several standard Hindu Songs in the staff notation.

2 In order therefore to improve the method of study of music throughout the State the following steps are to be taken -

(a) Instructing all the singing masters in the State in the Staff notation

(b) Publication in a graduated series of one or two songs every month in that notation to be used by the teachers in the classes

Since I intend devotion myself to the improvement of the Art of Music and making it my special study I request I may be transferred to the Educational Department where I shall be able to do much useful work in the cause of Music. I have a training of 12 years in India Music under such eminent professors as Vithala, Desanna & Subbanna and about 3 years acquaintance with the European system. I have also published a book entitled "The First Steps in India Music in English notation", which has been received by the public with applause, vid testimonials enclosed.

I humbly pray that in consideration of my special qualifications I may be taken on a suitable pay to the Educational Department.

I beg to remain,

Your Excellency's most obedient servant

TESTIMONIALS

Hindu Music in English Notation

(The Madras Mail 19th January 1907)

We heartily welcome a little work entitled First Steps in Hindu Music in English Notation by Mr H P Krishna Rao B.A. of Bangalore published by Messrs Weekes and Co. Hanover Street London. This is only the first of a series of work to be published by the same publisher. One of the great difficulties that has faced European musicians in understanding and appreciating Hindu music has been the want of an intelligible notation. The Hindus are essentially music loving people but their folk songs have hitherto been handed down by oral tradition principally through worthy attempts have been made in the past to systematise and present to the student in visual form the quantity and in many cases beautiful melodies that are familiar only to Hindu musical experts. The late Mr Chinna swamy Moodelliar M.A. spent thousands of rupees on an exhaustive work on Hindu music in a modified English notation and other worthy authors in the same field are Mr Sin arachari and Mr Subramanya Dikshitar of Tirupur. But our present author has realised that to make the study of Hindu music really popular it is necessary to begin at the beginning and go on step by step. He has successfully inaugurated his delightful Gaas and Pa nasam with the book to our notice and we wish him a full measure of success.

Among Europeans who have studied Hindu music and written upon it are Captain Day who has published a monumental work on the music and musical instruments of Southern India and Hyderabad—at a somewhat prohibitive price—and Messrs E. Stradick who some years ago published a very interesting little pamphlet on the same subject. There is no doubt however that the apparent want of interest among Europeans in the music of the Hindus is due chiefly to the difficulty they have experienced in studying it. Music takes a prominent share in home life, the religious life and the ceremonial life of Hindus and who has not listened with more than passing interest to the happy little boy or girl carolling forth some wondrous melody in passing along the road? Everything that tends to promote a love of music is to be encouraged and we are glad to see that Mr Krishna Rao is taking in hand a collection of songs for schools. With regard to sacred music set to vernacular words we would mention that the Rev J. Sharrock has published an admirable book of suitable tunes for Tamil lyrics and it is not so very long ago that we reviewed a similar work in Telugu compiled by another worthy Missionary and his family.

With regard to the plan of Mr Krishna Rao's book it is arranged very much on the lines of The Rudiments of Music by Professor W. H. Cummings in Novello's Music Primer Series and comprises nine chapters. Six of these are devoted to the explanation of the theory of music, the principles of notation, signs, symbols, etc. and the remainder to practical exercises. There is one thing that we would point out and that is while the notes, semibreves, minims, crotchets, quavers and the like are placed on a five line staff with ledger lines, no clef is used. Now in European notation the staff is meaningless until a clef has been placed in position. But we learn that as songs are composed and written in only one key in Hindu music the use of clefs is considered unnecessary. The keynote is placed on the first space for the sake of convenience and the question of pitch is presumably a matter of taste. What is called the key signature in European notation and which is there shown immediately after the clef is given above the composition in this little book and the time signature is similarly indicated. Mr Chinna swamy Moodelliar placed his key signature after the clef and very surprising some of them looked in English notation. Messrs Weekes and Co. have carried out their share of the work admirably and we would commend Mr Krishna Rao's series of Primers to all practical musicians. The cost of producing First Steps has been Rs 500 and an additional Rs 1000 will be needed for the next two volumes. The author solicits donations of Rs 10 or the purchase of a number of copies to enable him to complete his self-denying labour. The price of First Steps neatly bound in red calico with black lettering is only Re 1. Copies can be obtained from the City Mart Bangalore.

A New and Easy Method of Learning Hindu Music

(The Mysore Standard 23.11.07)

We have great pleasure in introducing to the public a new book on music entitled First Steps in Hindu Music in English Notation written by Mr H P Krishna Rao B.A. Sub Registrar Mysore Service. The book is neatly printed and published by Messrs Weekes and Co. London and can be had at the City Mart Bangalore City for the price of one rupee per copy.

For Seal

The book is written in English and on altogether a new plan and the staff Notation is used in the simplest form to suit the requirements of Hindu music. The book is divided into 9 Chapters of which 6 are devoted to the explanation of the theory of music and 3 to the practical exercises. The reader can easily understand the first principles that regulate the whole system of our music so far as the practical portion is concerned. The peculiar feature of the book is the attempt made at explaining the Gamakas fully and the abbreviations shown in page 41 are those mostly used in our songs. The adaptation of the grace notes in para 34 for the purpose of expressing Virek is quite original and speaks highly of the attainments of the author. We are glad to say that this system of notation can best be used to record even the most difficult Varhams and the author has placed the musical public under great obligation. We confidently hope that the public will accord to this book their recognition and support which it really deserves.

First Step in Hindu Music

(The Hindu — 10 2 1907)

We gladly welcome this little brochure on Hindu music published by Mr H P Krishna Rao B.A. of Mysore as supplying a want of a method for committing musical ideas to writing. There is no doubt that it will serve as a means for making permanent records of musical compositions provided proper symbols are devised to represent the more complicated Gamakas of Hindu music. The exercises can be begun in Sankarabharana Raga the major scale of the European music which is far more melodious than Mayamalavagoula. Only the notes of swaras of swarajitas are given without any satitya or words which are very necessary in impressing the music. The author seems to have taken a good deal of trouble in the preparation of the book as is clear from the very concise manner in which he explains the theory. We have no doubt that this will be found useful in the hands of those who try to master the English staff notation which it is the object of the book to popularise among lovers of Hindu music.

First Step in Hindu Music

(February 1907 — The Indian Review)

In this book the elements of Hindu music are clearly enunciated and the staff notation is used with great advantage. It must be said that the late Mr Chinnasamy Moodaliar was the pioneer in this field of work but as the scope of his work was wider the notation was as used by him very complicated. The use of the G clef and the placing of the time and key signatures on the staff made the system rather difficult and we are glad to note that in the book under review the difficulty is removed. The keynote is placed on the 1st space on the 5th line staff and the key and time signatures stand at the top of each composition. The pitch of the keynote is selected at the convenience of the singer in Hindu music and the use of the clefs is therefore not indispensable.

It has been shown by scientists that human ear could distinguish sounds extending through eleven octaves the upper limit being the sound produced by 32 768 vibrations per second. Hindu music recognises only 3 octaves which is just the range which a human ear can traverse. The number of sounds used in Hindu Music and their names is given in the 1st chapter. How notes are to be written on the staff is shown in the 2nd, Ragas are briefly explained in the 3rd. The various forms of notes and the 30 Thalams are described in the 4th and the 5th chapters. The 8th chapter is the most important. Only such abbreviations and embellishments as are most commonly used in songs are explained, and with a stock of materials so well equipped we do not see why when higher works promised by the author appear the longstanding complaint adduced only by the Hindus that music cannot be learnt by means of books may not disappear.
